

FIRST St. Louis Championship 2012

Compiled by FIRST Team 1208

So, you're coming to St. Louis!

You might have some questions...

- What's different & what's the same? (page 2)
- Where can we stay? (page 3)
- Where can we eat lunch? (page 4)
- Where can we eat dinner? (page 5-6)
- What can we do in our spare time? (page 7-13)
- How do we get to the Competition? (page 14)
- How do we use Metrolink? (page 15)
- Where do we park at the Competition? (page 16)
- Where is the nearest ...

 - Shopping Malls (page 19)

FIRST Championship in Atlanta/St. Louis

what's different & what's the same

- Both venues are convention centers connected to an indoor stadium used for NFL games. The St. Louis convention center is adjacent to the stadium, thus the distance from the pits to the playing fields will be considerably shorter than it was in Atlanta.
- The Edward Jones Dome (EJD) is in downtown St. Louis, while the Georgia Dome is slightly outside of downtown Atlanta. This means that the access to the EJD will be more congested and the load in/out area is smaller. Teams should anticipate that unloading/loading busses and/or equipment will take longer in St. Louis than in Atlanta.
- Both St. Louis and Atlanta are large urban areas and thus have the problems usually associated with such areas. Teams should use the same safety precautions as in Atlanta.
- Unlike Atlanta, St. Louis has several hotels located within one block of the venue. Teams using these hotels will not need vehicles for transport to and from the venue.
- The Georgia Dome is located right next to the CNN Center where there is an expansive food court. Downtown St. Louis does not have an equivalent facility. Numerous restaurants, delis, and diners, however, are located a short walk south of the EJD. Page 4 of this document locates several of these food sources.
- Both Atlanta and St. Louis have paid parking next to the venue. Several St. Louis parking garages are very conveniently located. Cheaper alternatives are a block or two away. It is recommended that teams use the paid parking rather than parking in the street.

Purchase Your Fare

You will need a current ticket, pass or transfer to ride MetroLink. Tickets and passes are available for purchase at Ticket Vending Machines located at all MetroLink stations. Cash and coin are accepted, as well as Visa, Mastercard and Discover credit cards at Missouri MetroLink Stations.

If your ride involves one trip on MetroLink, purchase a MetroLink One-Ride Ticket. It is good for two hours in one direction, on MetroLink only.

If you plan to use both MetroLink and MetroBus, purchase a MetroLink Two-Hour Pass. The MetroLink Two-Hour Pass gives you unlimited use of the Metro system on both MetroLink and MetroBus, in any direction, for two hours.

Metro One-Day Pass gives you unlimited use of the Metro system, on both MetroLink and MetroBus, for an entire day

Time Stamp Your Ticket

Certain MetroLink tickets comes prevalidated with a time stamp, but some do not. Double check your ticket to make sure it has a time stamp, and if it doesn't, insert it in one of the red validation machines located at all MetroLink platforms.

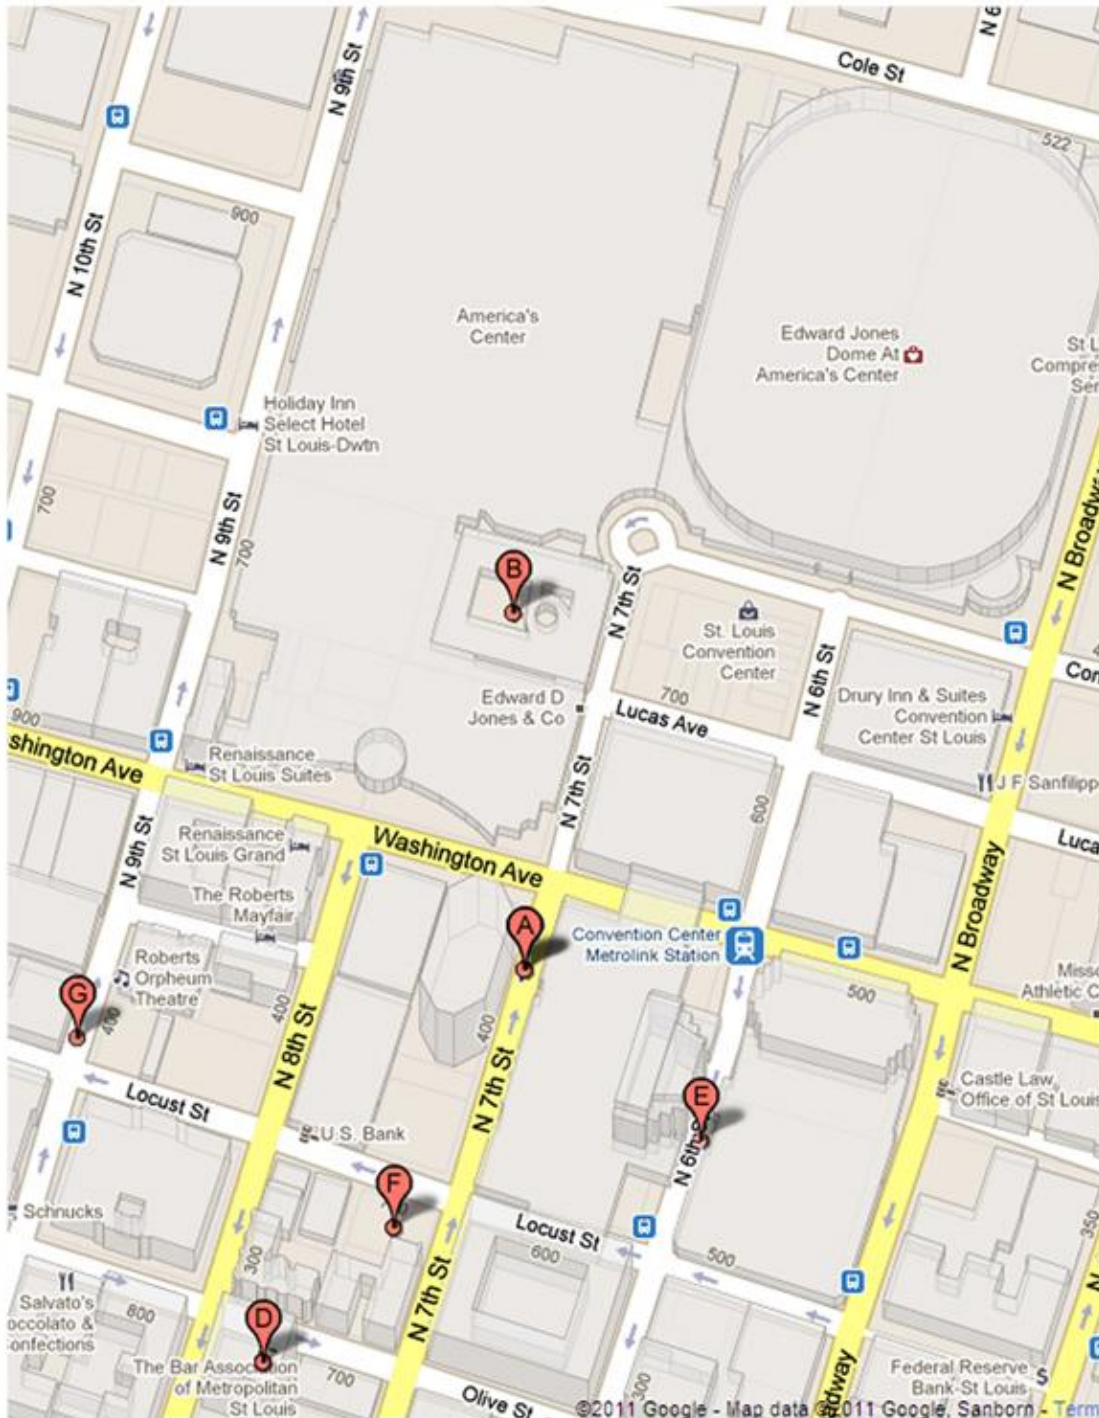

Board Your Train

MetroLink operates two lines: the Red Line and Blue Line. The Red Line provides service between the stations Lambert Airport Terminal #1 in Missouri and the Shiloh-Scott Station in Illinois. The Blue Line provides service between the stations Shrewsbury-Lansdowne I-44 in Missouri and Fairview Heights Station in Illinois. Check the direction and line of the MetroLink train by looking for the red or blue headsigns located on the front and sides of the train cars. Both lines stop at all MetroLink stations between the Forest Park-DeBaliviere and Fairview Heights MetroLink Stations. Transfer trains at Forest Park-DeBaliviere Station if you need to continue on another line.
