

STOP YELLING ROBOT!

It's not necessary

It's arrogant

It's obnoxious

It's rude

It creates excess noise

It startles bystanders

It turns off the visiting public

It starts a chain reaction among the other teams

It soon becomes white noise and it loses meaning

It doesn't effectively increase safety, and may even create a hazard

It's safety theater

How can you move a robot safely without yelling ROBOT!?

Don't rush

Look where you're going

Politely say "excuse us"

If someone's back is turned, tap them on the shoulder

Allow people to move out of the way

Follow up with a "thanks"
